LIQUOR HURTS BEER MONIES

State Enforcement Chief Plans License Revocation, Other Legal Action

State Beer Commissioner Owen T. Owen "clamped the lid" on eight Mandan drinking places late Saturday afternoon and announced Monday that he would bring padlock proceedings against them and also might revoke their beer licenses.

Places raided by Owen and a squad of 20 men, consisting of regulatory department inspectors and several others recruited for the occasion, were The Showboat in the Missouri river, The Dome, The Street Car, The Tavern, The Mint, The Log Cabin, The Cave and The Stag.

Several days ago, Owen said, he raided other Mandan places and obtained evidence which will be used in connection with contemplated legal proceedings to clean up the town.

Keisch to Bring Actions

Following a conference Monday afternoon with C. F. Keisch, state's attorney for Morton county, Owen said the liquor seized had been turned over to him and to Sheriff Robert T. Gray and that the Morton county officials would institute padlock proceedings in the sixth district court against the places raided.

These, he said, probably would take the form of applications for an injunction forbidding them to continue operation on the ground that they are public nuisances.

Two reasons were given by Owen for his activity. The first was the fact that the laws governing sale of beer and other drinks to minors had been violated, according to reports received by him. The other was the fact that the serving of hard liquor has the effect of reducing tax revenues from the sale of beer, a legal beverage.

Gambling Devices Seized

At the Showboat, Owen said, a gambling table and chuck-a-luck game were taken out and stored in the Wachter warehouse here. Gambling devices at the Dome were not removed but were placed under padlock.

Owen said he was advised that both places were running full blast Saturday night despite the raids in the late afternoon.

Nothing was found at the Street Car but at the Log Cabin, the Mint, the Tavern and the Cave some whiskey was confiscated.

Under the law, any person operating an undesirable place or one where the law is broken, can be refused a beer license and, if he already has a license, can be revoked on order of the beer commissioner.

Beer Chief Is Judge

The beer commissioner is the judge of whether or not a license shall be revoked, although an appeal to the district court can be taken by the operator in case de orders a license canceled.

Owen also said that some of his men had picked up 40 or 45 cases of whiskey from a storeroom place Friday night but that he had not received a full report on the case and

J. D. Harris Named by Welford to Six Year Board of Administration Term

Announcement that J. D. Harris, judge of the Dunn county district court for the last 16 years, had been appointed a member of the state board of administration, was made Monday by Gov. Walter Welford.

Harris will succeed Nelson Sauvain, now chairman of the board, on August 1. Sauvain formerly was superintendent of schools at Devils Lake.

Sauvain's term expired July 1 and it is known that the governor has had a number of names under consideration since well before that time.

Sauvain Named by Shafer

With the Harris appointment not effective until August 1, Sauvain will have served one month longer than the six-year term to which he was appointed in 1929 by former Gov. George F. Shafer.

The Harris appointment is for a six-year term, expiring in July, 1941.

Judge Harris, 52 years old, was a member of the reserve during the World War. He was born in Nova Scotia, the son of a sea captain. Following a trip around the world as second steward with the merchant marine, Harris came to North Dakota in 1907, settling in Dunn county. He lived in Virginia for a year, and then farmed for eight years in Dunn county, west of the Killdeer mountains. He then moved to Manning, serving as deputy register of deeds for six years before becoming county judge.

Has Two Children

Mrs. Harris died in 1932. Harris has two children, Herbert C., a World war veteran and now in business in Washington, D. C. and a daughter, Mrs. Sadie Landon Kelley of Rockton, Calif.

Harris is a member of the Masonic and Elks lodges.

He handed in his resignation as Dunn county judge Monday morning, pending the appointment of Lester Anderson, deputy clerk for six years, as his successor. The Dunn county board will make an appointment in August.

Judge Harris has been a member of the Nonpartisan League and identifies himself as a "progressive" Republican.

GERMANY EASES UP IN DRIVE AGAINST 'ENEMIES' OF REICH

Blomberg Visit With Hitler Results in Allowing Non-Aryan Enlistments

Berlin, July 28.—P—The tension among Jews, Roman Catholics and the world was relaxed today as the steel helmet was considerably eased Monday by the news of a "social" visit of Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of war.

The general feeling prevailed that Von Blomberg had pointed out to Hitler the international impression created by the drastic measures against

PRIEST JAILED

Hanau, Germany, July 29.—P—The Rev. Ludwig Roth, a Roman Catholic priest, was sentenced Monday to eight months imprisonment for allegedly declaring in a sermon July 8, 1934: "Human life is worthless in the new Germany . . . German Catholics must be prepared to suffer since starvation, persecution, and detention camps exist in Germany as in Russia.

"political Catholicism" and the steel helmet and by the general attacks upon Jews.

That von Blomberg's efforts are not without success is indicated by a decree issued Monday under the caption "an ordinance changing the provision of non-Aryans to active military service."

It was signed by von Blomberg and Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, and at least temporarily makes possible the taking of non-Aryans into the army, navy and air force.

Hitler Himmler Promotion

Persistent rumors circulated Monday that Heinrich Himmler, chief of the secret police and dominant figure during the 1934 Nazi "blood purge," would replace Frick as minister of the interior.

It was generally considered that such an appointment would mean a definite liquidation of the Nazi conflict with Jews, "political Catholicism" and "reactionary" war veterans in a radical way.

The only comment forthcoming however from official sources was:

"We know nothing about this."

Himmler has been secret police chief since April 20, 1934, and is also leader of the Schutz Staffel, picked Nazi guards. Bavarian police commissioner and a member of the ministerial council for the defense of the reich, he would take over the interior ministry in the course of next week.

Other Developments

Other developments in Nazidom's drive on its enemies were:

1. Views in several parts of the country, defying government orders against reference to politics entered daily prayers for "Germany's salvation."

2. Officials announced that several Jews and Aryan girls were sent to concentration camps at Dachau for alleged racial disgrace.

3. Munich also announced that they discovered "extensive Communist propaganda."

The parachute drop is not scheduled until after 3 o'clock so that this event and the other part of the races can be seen from the baseball park.

As opponents for Bismarck for the booster game, Manager Churchill has secured the fast Jamestown baseball club which means another pitching duel between Ralston Pagel of Bismarck and Ray Starr of Jamestown, bringing together the best men available, it was said today.

TENNESSEE JUDGE HOLDS AAA LEGAL

Memphis Packer's Suit to Recover $6,863 in Processing Taxes Denied

Memphis, Tenn., July 29.—P—An opinion upholding the decision of the U. S. district court holding the agricultural adjustment act, with its processing taxes, constitutional, was taken by the supreme court, it was announced Monday.

Hugh Macaveny, attorney for a Memphis packer who sought to recover $6,863 in processing taxes on the ground that the act is unconstitutional, announced plans for the appeal.

Federal Judge John D. Martin, of the western district of Tennessee, dismissed the action last Saturday.

Consider the background of the act," Martin said. "It was passed when an emergency existed.

"The situation was desperate. Manifestly the decision of the Supreme court was to be retained.

"No more serious a problem existed than that of the farmer. And so the agricultural adjustment act was born. It remains constitutional so far as its constitutionality was concerned by many reports and improvement in the agricultural situation was noted.

"The decision of this court reasons that practically if any legislation has ever been necessary for the good of the United States and its farmers, it was the AAA."

Meanwhile, County Agent H. O. Putnam reported that the intensely hot weather had speeded grain crops to maturity in that section. Some wheat already has been cut and harvesting of barley, oats and rye is general. The wheat harvest will be in full swing during the next few days.

Reporting on damage to flax fields by army worms after a survey Saturday, Putnam said the late flax seems to be infested the worst and that some fields of early-planted flax have not been damaged at all. Near McKenzie, he said, a field of late flax is badly damaged while across the road from it is an early-planted field which the worms have not touched.

Infestation Localized

The infestation is somewhat localized, he said, bad spots having been found near Wilton and Wing, in Lien and Thelma townships, and north of both Menoken and McKenzie.

With the harvest getting under way here, the federal re-employment service reported no prospective labor shortages, similar to that reported Monday from some states to the south.

J. C. Taylor, state director, said 24,000 persons already are listed with his office and that release of 10,000 from the FERA rolls would be a material help. There are many duplications of names on the two lists, however.

Putnam said that "a lot of men" will be needed but that some farmers will have no money to employ help. Some farmers with good to fair credit ratings are able to get money under the assistance of government rules, he said, but others have been refused loans by private lenders because they were regarded as poor risks.

Try to Get U. S. Aid

What three will do for money to pay labor was still a question. And various agencies interested were still trying to get further help from Washington.

R. A. Wilson, FERA administrator and executive head of the Rural Rehabilitation corporation, said he plans that organization does not have enough money to finance the harvest. Also like the banks, he said, that security and the assurance is will get no money back. Help will be extended by it to farmers who can qualify under its rules and who are regarded as good moral risks."

In some places the Federal Reserve Agricultural Loan corporation has taken over mortgages as well as loans on cattle and machinery and there will be no foreclosure of the farmers from getting money to finance the harvest, Wilson said, and the bank has been generally engaged in attempting to liquidate its loans so that it can get out of business and turn over its business to the district farm loan association set up by the government to handle agricultural credit loans.

The result of this it was pointed out has been to give up normal credit sources.

Work Day and Night

In the lower middle-west the rush was on to get in the crop. High temperatures had ripened the grain prematurely and many farmers worked day and night to get the crop in before the harvest before the grain became shattered.

Thousands of bushels of corn, Iowa, Minnesota and parts of Nebraska, however, will later be available for the demand and local workers with the fields under the "no work-for-food" order and the FERA unable to find enough men to work the fields, Iowa City, Ia., were unable to find enough men to work the fields and many farmers and their husbands in the

In South Dakota, according to dispatches, wages ranged from $3 a day and board and room and $4 a day without board and room. Wages were said to be higher in the northeastern part of the state and as low as $2 a day in the southeastern part.
